Foreclosure Notice.

BANGOR SAVINGS BANK, of Bangor, gives notice that Ezra Barney of said Bangor, by his deed bearing date March 14, 1874, and recorded in Penobscot Registry of Deeds book 440, page 341, conveyed in mortgage to said Bank a certain lot of land with the buildings thereon, situate in said Bangor, on the west side of Broadway, being the then present homestead and [illegible] as follows: Easterly by said street, westerly by the Episcopal Church lot, northerly by Wm. T. Pearson's homestead lot, and southerly by Thomas S. Egery's homestead lot; reference to said deed and record to be had.

The conditions of said mortgage being broken, the said Bank by reason thereof claims a foreclosure.

Dated at Bangor this seventeenth day of July 1875.

BANGOR SAVINGS BANK,
By JOHN PATTEN, Treasurer.

STATE OF MAINE.

TREASURER'S OFFICE,
AUGUSTA, July 14, 1875.

Pursuant to chap. 6, sec. 48 of the Revised Statutes I will at the State Treasurer's office, in Augusta, on the first day of September next, at twelve o'clock, noon, sell and convey by deed to the highest bidder all the interest of the State in the tracts of land hereinafter described, lying in unincorporated townships, the said tracts having been forfeited to the State for State taxes and county taxes, certified to the Treasurer of State for the year 1873.

The sale and conveyance of each tract will be made subject to a right in the owner or part owner whose rights have been forfeited, to redeem the same at any time within one year after the sale, by paying or tendering to the purchaser his proportion of what the purchaser paid therefor at the sale with interest at the rate of twenty per cent. per annum, from the time of sale, and one dollar for release, or such owner may redeem his interest by paying as aforesaid to the Treasurer of State, as provided in chap. 6, sec. 44 of the Revised Statutes.

No tract, however, will be sold at a price less than the full amount due thereon for such unpaid State and county taxes, interest and cost as described in the following schedule:

A Card to the Public!

BANGOR TROTTING PARK.

The proprietor of the above Park gives public notice that having been at great expense to place the track in excellent condition, he demands of the community a proper recognition of his rights.

Season tickets are now ready for persons desiring the use of the track for the purpose of exercising or training their horses, on all days, excepting those of advertised trots.

Any gentleman who has not yet purchased one and wishes to obtain the same, can procure a ticket by application to the proprietor, or to his manager at the track, or at the office of the Penobscot Exchange.

Notice is also hereby given that any person found within the enclosure on days of advertised trots, who has entered in an unlawful way and without purchasing a ticket, will be arrested and prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

The above is rendered necessary from the fact that numbers are daily drawing on the track without paying for the privilege and also that during the recent June meeting from a quarter to one-half the number of spectators were composed of persons who had scaled the fence or gone by the gate keepers by false statements of their right to do so.

It is hoped that all lovers of horses and horse trotting, and those desiring to see racing conducted on a fair and honorable manner, will assist the proprietor by their patronage in his endeavor to improve [illegible] interests in this vicinity.

No gentleman will—none other must break over the rules above expressed.

To his many friends and the public at large the subscriber extends his sincere thanks for their patronage.

T. H. WHITE.

Meetings will be given monthly during this season. july2

Foreclosure Notice.

Whereas, Samuel T. Howe, of Charleston, in the County of Penobscot and State of Maine, by his deed of mortgage dated the twenty seventh day of September A. D. 1873, conveyed to me, the subscriber, in fee and in mortgage, the following piece or parcel of land situated in said Charleston, bounded and described as follows, to wit: Being part of lot number twenty two (22) according to the plan of the north quarter of said town, as made by Andrew Strong Esq., and being the same as deeded by Thomas S. Dexter to Samuel T. Howe, containing sixty acres by measurement. And whereas the conditions of said mortgage have been broken, I claim to foreclose said mortgage and give this notice for that purpose.

SPIRITUALISM'S HUMBUGS.

PROFESSOR TOBIN'S LECTURE—THE KATIE KING AND OTHER MYSTERIES.

[Boston Advertiser, July 26.]

That the American public much prefers humbug to truth has often been asserted, and the assertion received fresh proof in the small audience that gathered in Investigator Hall last evening to hear and see Professor Tobin's expose of Spiritualism, a scientific seance that was the direct result of the recent successful impositions at the Boston Theatre. If the professor had admitted his entertainment as the result of mediumship, his hall would have been crowded and had his results been heard and seen in semi-darkness, hundreds would have expressed perfect faith in the supernaturalness of his feats, while the most sharp-eyed sceptics could have found nothing to justify their doubts.

The stage was well taken up with the usual curtain cabinet and paraphernalia of the mediumistic manifestations. Professor Tobin appeared soon after eight and proceeded to illustrate the manner of receiving raps from a drum, by the transmission of sound through tapes, the operator rasping the tapes at his end with the aid of resin. The illusion was perfect. Rapping on the table was represented as emanating from the same agency in accord with the well-known laws of acoustics. The process of spirit whispers was then explained by the aid of a parchment tunnel, the operator holding the same to his mouth. Before touching upon the more manifest mysteries performed by sealed and bound mediums, the professor asked for an investigating committee, and Dr. Morin, a sceptic, joined Mr. Jones, a Spiritualist, as a committee. The medium was then tightly tied by the wrists to two brass cuffs that were screwed together, the connecting rod passing through a pine post, which was well fastened to the floor. The committee then sealed with wax the post, the cuffs and the cords, the committee announcing that it would be impossible to stir them for the purpose of taking them off without fracturing the seals. Closing the curtain Samoset announced his presence on the drum and played the harmonium. Opening the cabinet again, the committee announced the medium unmoved. A solid ring was then left inside and in a moment was upon the arm of the medium, the seals still unbroken, the cords, cuffs and post unmoved. The medium being coatless a coat was borrowed and laid upon his lap, the curtain drawn, and when drawn again the coat was on the medium's back, yet the cords and seals remained intact.

The Katie King mystery was then shown up, which the professor had obtained directly from the original Kate. Spirit hands were shown above the curtain, a bouquet was handed out, of flowers fresh gathered in the spirit land, then a materialized face of Katie remained in plain sight for five minutes, and the Indian spirit Samoset showed his face. While Samoset's ugly visage was in sight, the curtain was drawn aside, showing the medium, who was left securely bound, holding up the Indian's head. He, the professor announced, was the active agent of all. Lights turned on discovered to the committee that the seals were all unbroken, yet the cuffs had been removed from the post. The committee was floored. The performance closed with blood writing on the arm, produced, the professor said, by the use of chemicals, developed by the heat of the hand. Mr. Tobin said that he proposed to continue his scientific seances, not claiming to expose Spiritualism, but showing his audiences how much that was palmed off for the acts of materialized spirits—the same feats—could be performed by the aid of science under natural laws. But he assured them that they never would have to be put in the dark before they were enlightened.

UMBRELLAS IN THE EAST.

All over the East the umbrella has been used from remote ages, though at first mainly as an emblem of royalty. But for centuries past these useful appendages have afforded shelter to all classes from the fierce storms and burning sunshine of those fervid climes. In form and size the ordinary umbrella is nearly like our own, but the material is silk, or paper beautifully painted or glazed, and thus rendered perfectly water-proof. Though not very durable, these umbrellas are light and pretty, and so very cheap—about twenty cents each—that one does not mind their wearing out occasionally. They have been made and used in China, in just the same style, for fifteen centuries, and in the neighboring countries for perhaps nearly as long a time.

The state umbrella is quite a different affair—much larger and of the richest materials. It is placed over the royal couches, thrones, and chairs quite as generally as carried in the open air. They are borne by high officers over the king and other members of the royal family wherever they go, and "umbrella holders" are recognized members of the royal household both in Burmah and Siam. One of the numerous titles of His Majesty of Siam is "Lord of the White Elephant and Supreme Owner of the Umbrella"—that is, of the umbrella of state, which it would be high treason to raise over any head but that of the king. It is of crimson or purple silk, very richly embroidered in precious stones, lined usually with white satin, inwrought with silver flowers and seed pearls in exquisite clusters, and trimmed with heavy gold fringe and costly lace. Sometimes, on great occasions, umbrellas are carried in tiers of two, three, and five, one above the other, diminishing in size toward the top, and forming a perfect pyramid, while from the rim of each umbrella depend scores of tiny gold or silver bells, which, moved by the passing breeze, make sweet music that floats upon the air like the sounds of an Æolian harp. In Burmah the king's umbrella is white, and that of the court red while in the royal city, but elsewhere they carry gold or gilded ones; and always over the dead bodies of the nobility are placed gold umbrellas, usually the gift of the sovereign. Both in Burmah and Siam there are many state umbrellas, all of precisely the same pattern and one or more is carried over the king's head on all occasions, whether sitting or reclining, riding or walking, at home or abroad.

The Emperor of China, who never does anything in moderation, has twenty-four umbrellas carried before him whenever he goes out hunting—perhaps as a protective against wild beasts. But then, as he has an equal or larger number to herald his coming on other occasions, we may conclude it is only a harmless displaying his wealth or grandeur—rather an absurd display it would seem to us. The heir to the crown has one umbrella, and other princes and nobles five, three, two, and one respectively, according to their rank. So one may usually read the rank of a noble he sees approaching by the number and style of his umbrellas, as he discovers the rank of a mandarin, or civil officer, by the color of his [illegible]. PRESERVING PLANTS AGAINST DROUGHT

Rain may be vouchsafed to the parched soil before this reaches the eyes of readers, nevertheless a few hints on the most approved methods of sustaining plant life during dry spells may not prove amiss. It is an excellent rule in planting to always "puddle" everything. Prepare a sufficient quantity of thin, smooth mud avoiding clods and stones, and dip the roots therein before planting, this will adhere and keep the roots moist for a long time. Press the soil firmly to all roots, ramming them if necessary, and where dibbling is employed see that the soil is pressed tightly at the ends of the roots as well as at the surface. It is time misspent to pour water on the surface, especially during hot, windy weather, as it is evaporated in a short time; but if a mulch is spread over the soil, close around the plant, and a little shallow basin made around each, to hold water, good will come of it. I have seen valuable trees saved during severe droughts by making several holes around them by means of a crowbar, then mulched, and water poured in copiously, which readily finds its way to the fibres. This, with ordinary newspaper tied loosely around the body of the tree, to shade it from the hot rays of the sun, will prove highly beneficial. Partial shade placed over any newly planted perennial such as evergreen brush or similar material, has saved many a beautiful inhabitant of our gardens. But man's invention has never yet been able to invent a substitute for one good drenching shower in the real old-fashioned style.—Cor. N. Y. Tribune.

STATE NEWS.

Aroostook.

Mr. Amos Kimball of Silver Ridge was struck by a falling tree, while at a chopping bee, on Tuesday of last week, and his thigh was fractured and his back and shoulders were severely bruised.

Among the first settlers of Fort Fairfield were two brothers named Hoyt from Phillips. This was forty years ago. They had large families of industrious and frugal sons and daughters, who have married in that section largely and are among the best citizens in the new county. The other day the "Hoyt" connections had a picnic in Fort Fairfield, which was a very pleasant occasion.

Cumberland.

The Press says that Dorcas Bagley who died Saturday morning in Portland was a native of Portland, and had attained the great age of 93 years and 11 months.

Late Friday night a young man named Merritt, of Portland, was thrown from a carriage and seriously injured. Fatal results were feared at the time, but Saturday he was out of danger.

Sunday afternoon the two story wooden house and barn of Capt. Barberick of the schooner Jerusha Baker near Dunston's Corner, Scarboro', were burned, with all the furniture in the house except a cook stove and melodeon, and all the farming utensils and ten tons of hay in the barn, but the cause is not known. Loss about $2500. The buildings were partially insured.

Kennebec.

The Mail says that Mr. Emery D. Clark of North Vassalboro' for many years in the service of the Maine Central Railroad Company at Augusta and latterly in the employ of Smith & Meader, at their mill in Waterville, died quite suddenly and unexpectedly at his home on Tuesday.

The Augusta Journal says that a runner for a patent safe, and another for a patent safe lock, reached the scene of the Winthrop bank robbery fifteen minutes before a single newspaper man did, Friday morning, the latter were not a bit late, either.

Mr. Vigereaux of Farmingdale, who was injured some time last winter by a runaway horse in Gardiner, has commenced a suit against the owner of the animal, Mr. Kane laying his damages at $10,000.

Canker rash is very prevalent at Rockport.

The Camden Herald says: "We have among the summer boarders at the present time, Mr. A. R. Dunton who has been regarded as the champion penman of the world, also Mr. Fred O. Young, the champion off hand penman, Prof. D. M. Waitt of the Augusta Business College and in a few days Mr. L. D. Smith of Hartford, Ct. is expected to visit Camden. All of these are Maine men, and three of them are from the towns of Hope and Lincolnville."

Lincoln.

Saturday evening a few minutes before 10 o'clock, a fire broke out in a store occupied by A. Jameson, dry goods dealer, Sproul's block, supposed to have originated from the explosion of a lamp. The Triumph engine company was promptly on the spot and succeeded in entirely extinguishing it in about two hours. Estimated loss is about $10,000, as follows: On block $4,000, insured for $2,000; Mrs. L. W. Kimball, stock $1,500, insured $700, Mrs. Geo Sproul, $1,000, household goods, no insurance, W. F. Levensaler $500, insured $300, with some small losses to other tenants in the block. The able efforts of the fire company recently organized here alone saved them from as extensive and disastrous conflagration as was suffered in 1854.

The "Blueberry Line" is the touching appellation now given to the Damariscotta stage, says the Gardiner Reporter.

York.

The Times says that Saturday forenoon Charles Harris, Luke McGuire and Louis Wormell, the three persons arrested for stealing property at the time of the burning of the Old Orchard House, were arraigned before Judge Derby at Saco. When McGuire was arrested, a valise containing ten bottles of whisky was taken from him. Saturday the charge brought against him was selling liquor at the Beach, and he was sent to Alfred jail for three months. Chas. Harris, the barber, who deposited considerable stolen jewelry in Biddeford, pleaded guilty, and was held in $5000 bail for trial in September. He was sent to jail. Harris also implicated a young man named Louis Wormell in the thefts, and he was arrested. He stoutly denied having anything to do with the matter. The court, however, thought they had sufficient evidence to hold him, and he was bound over in $500. He was also sent to jail. Mr. Staples, proprietor of the Old Orchard House has decided not to rebuild this season at least.

The Times complains that a sedate looking man has been selling the people of Biddeford smart-weed seeds for those of a choice plant.

Since January 1st, the town of Kennebunk has furnished at the almshouse, 700 meals to tramps; but now that they are required to work enough to pay for their food, the number has grown considerably less.

The rate of taxation in Kennebunk is $10 per thousand.

George Ford of Kennebunk accidentally shot himself in the hand Friday.

The members of the Kennebunk brass band have appeared out in a very neat uniform, at an expense of about $570.

ART AND ARTISTS.

The Galaxy relates an amusing incident about Salvator, the celebrated artist. Anna Gaetano, who kept an inn in Florence, although in her seventieth year and hideously ugly, had the [illegible] to beg Salvator to paint her portrait, that she might reach posterity by the hand of the greatest master of the age. He produced one of the strongest likenesses ever taken, but to the astonishment and anger of the ancient hostess, she figured in the portrait as a pilgrim in male habiliments and a long gray beard.

A curious Paris artist's custom is the exhibition of paintings refused by the Salon. A correspondent describes the lot as a whole as "Men and women of wood, landscapes of enamelled tin, horrific skies, and water as liquid as a stone wall, and as transparent as chalk,—things that would be intolerable to a trays and abominable fireboards.

A New York correspondent writes: One of the leading features in the avenue is Mr. John Taylor Johnston's residence, corner of Ninth street. It is a marble palace, whose porch every Thursday is thronged with visitors to his picture gallery. Mr. Johnston's gallery contains a number of gems, the principal of which is a Turner—the only one which has ever been exhibited in New York. Mr. Lenox has four by this artist, but his gallery is never opened to any but the [illegible] of his friends. Mr. Johnston's Turner is three feet square, and cost a trifle over $300 per square foot. It is called "The Slave Ship," the vessel being in a storm and the slaves thrown overboard. It is a chaos of brilliant colors, and looks like the work of a lunatic artist who was endeavoring to illustrate the vagaries of some bewildering dream. Mr. Johnston's gallery contains a wide variety of elegant pictures and its entire value is not less than $200,000.

THE ROBERTS-EMERY CAMPAIGN

The document which we give below was not exactly intended for our readers, but as it treats of matters in which they are somewhat interested we print it as a matter of political information. Perhaps the point which will strike the reader as most significant is the existence of a Democratic State Executive Committee "a central board of management outside of and more solid than the ordinary State Committee and the personnel of this superior council have afforded striking evidence of the truth of what we have asserted concerning the sort of men who are at present leading the Democratic party of Maine. Here we find the candidate for Governor taking active part as a wire-puller in his own behalf, and here, too, we find in still closer connection the names of Roberts and Emery the association of which by Col. Smith in his letter has been so vigorously denounced as abuse? The military and war like tone of the bulletin will also be noticed and a special evidence of Mr. Emery's care in keeping the "patriot soldier" business prominent will be found in the prefixing of the military title ... to the signature of the senior partner. Messrs. Roberts, Emery & Co. evidently believe in discipline and have taken entire charge of ... as they speak of "our plans" and "our purposes," and in ... the threatenings that "if our orders are faithfully and promptly executed," the middle of August will find "our whole army in battle array."

The reader can analyze this document for himself, and we only call special attention to direction number 6, in which the candidate and Marcellus Emery urge that personal effort with the wavering and doubting would be fruitful of good results. The results aimed at are the placing of the political affairs of the good State of Maine in the hands of a "Democratic State Executive Committee" of which Gen. Charles W. Roberts is the figure-head and Marcellus Emery the "Boss."

We have not yet received circular No. 1, and must await the time specified before obtaining those "further and more important communications which Gen. Roberts and Mr. Emery have in store for the faithful. In the meantime the rank and file can give attention to the following "orders" of number two.

No. 2. DISTRICT CIRCULAR.

DIRECTIONS TO CANVASSERS.

BANGOR, July 15, 1875.

Dear Sir:—

The Maine State Executive Committee invoke your aid in the immediate enrollment and organization of the grand Democratic Army, preparatory to the coming conflict on the 13th of September.

Inspired by the noble example of our brethren in sister States, and by the cheering omens all about us in our own, we enter upon this campaign with confidence that the victory for which we have so long struggled is now within our grasp.

For the furtherance of our plans and the accomplishment of our purpose, we ask your zealous efforts and hearty co-operation. If our orders are faithfully and promptly executed, the middle of August will find every Democrat in the State enrolled in Companies Regiments Brigades, Divisions and Corps, in the school districts, towns, Representative classes, Counties and Congressional Districts. That date will also find our whole army, for the first time in twenty years, in battle array, from the New Hampshire boundary to the Province borders, and from the Canadian frontiers to the Ocean. We shall also know the exact strength and disposition of the enemy's forces.

Please then give heed to the following directions:—

1. Canvass every voter in your school-district ascertain his political disposition at the present time, and enroll his name under the proper head on the canvassing blank.

2. Make your canvass of the voters with especial reference to the respective candidates for Governor, ROBERTS and CONNOR.

3. As soon as you have completed the canvass of your district, fill up your blank, and make up footings in figures.

4. When all is finished make immediate return of the blank to the head canvasser of your town.

5. Communicate freely with all Democrats to the end that each and all may understand that every inch of the State is to be fought over, and that every man is expected to do his whole duty.

6. Much arduous work is now, and personal effort and persuasion with the wavering and doubting will be fruitful of good results.

7. Make return of your canvass by the first day of August, to the end that the Executive Committee may have the enrollment of the State completed by the 15th of that month.

☞ The Executive Committee will have further and important communications to make to you immediately after the canvass of the whole State is finished.

GEN. CHARLES W. ROBERTS,
MARCELLUS EMERY,
CHARLES N. HERSEY,
Democratic State Executive Committee.

A TERRIBLE MAN

Many of the readers of the Commercial have been amused at its persistency in holding Mr. Blaine responsible for all past, present and prospective ills, from the advent of the potato-beetle to the yellow fever at Barrancas, and one of our most wide-awake business men, who is by no means a politician, has been so impressed by the absurdity with which that paper attributes to the distinguished ex-Speaker the authorship of our share of the business depression which is now seriously felt all over the world, that he has pasted together the following extracts from a single page of last evening's Commercial, as the best commentary upon its nonsense:

ALARM AT OLDHAM

156 Mills Stop Work.

LONDON, July 27. The Manchester Guardian says an alarming state of things prevails at Oldham. Only six of the 162 mills belonging to the Employes Association are working.

* * * And yet there are those who think that it is best to have a few years more of Blaineism.

A Heavy Failure.

The telegraph this evening announces the failure of the great house of DUNCAN, SHERMAN & Co., of New York. The crash caused much excitement in the metropolis. Gold, which opened at 112½ speedily went up to 116¾. Finally, after much fluctuation, it settled down to 11.. It is reported that other firms are shaky. The fact is that the whole country has been for years drunk with Blaineism, and it is having a fearful time in sobering off.

A CHOICE OF DEMOCRATIC LEADERS

(From the N. Y. Evening Post)

The other day we suggested whether, if it be inexpedient that both Mr. John Morrissey and the college oarsmen shall be at Saratoga during regatta week, it is not expedient to compel the absence of the former. There are good reasons, which are daily growing better why Mr. Morrissey should voluntarily abandon the Springs. We do not doubt that his business is prosperous, or that, for persons of vicious tastes, he furnishes one of the most powerful attractions of the season. But a larger field invites him. If he will only devote his undivided attention to Democratic politics in this city, he may accomplish a greater good for a greater number than he ever can hope to do with chips and cards and gambling games at the famous resort of fashion and folly.

There is much less Democratic harmony just now than is desired by faithful Democrats. Not only are the members of the party in the East and in the West in arms against each other on the currency question not only are "statesmen of mark" and "even Governor Allen" advocating financial doctrines which must rend the two wings of the party as wide asunder as the poles but in New York, in the very stronghold of Tammany Hall, strife and bitterness prevail. The truth is that the officers of the "reformed" Tammany Society are far less skillful and successful managers than their predecessors of the old Tweed Ring. Scarcely had they won their important victory last Autumn when their ranks divided, and the Governor of their choice found a large and powerful faction within his own party arrayed against him. Their illustration of "home rule" by appointing Jerseymen to office in this city was followed by the painful jealousies and ruinous rivalries which gave rise to the slang names of "Swallow-tails" and "Short-hairs." Finally they have made the mistake of quarrelling with Morrissey, their strongest man—at least Heenan, Sullivan and Poole long ago discovered him to be so. They have resolved to put him out of their councils, and Morrissey himself admits that he must go.

In view of the incompetency of these Tammany managers which will inevitably compel their early overthrow, there seems to us to be only two plain ways of restoring harmony among the Democratic factions which control the government of this city. One is the return of Tweed to the administration of the affairs of the party. Matters appear to be shaping themselves to that end. Tweed is out of the Penitentiary, and shrewd observers state that he is half out of Ludlow street jail. At every stage of his advance toward liberty he meets the comforting assurance that it is far better that a hundred guilty men shall escape than that the law shall be strained for the punishment of one criminal; and so prison doors swing open before him on technical images, and bills of particulars rise as friendly bulwarks against the assaults of his adversaries. If he is half out of jail already, it will not be surprising if the other half of his burly figure shall soon emerge from its luxurious confinement. Once free, men who believe that he is still a power assert Tweed will have little difficulty in resuming his seat in Tammany Hall, and restoring discipline and harmony to the demoralized society. The other way is for Morrissey himself to take control of affairs, and reorganize "reformed" Tammany.

Of the two men we do not hesitate to say that we prefer to be governed and taxed by Morrissey. True, he is an ostentatious law-breaker, but he never has robbed the public treasury, and his worst enemies admit that he always plays what they call a square game. He is a "Democratic statesman of mark"—with what emphasis he has made his mark his old antagonists can testify. That he is energetic and adroit is evident from his success in openly pursuing an unlawful business in defiance of the Young Men's Christian Association of Saratoga and the statutes of the State of New York. A man who thus can disarm the hostility of the Association, and persuade its members to tolerate the undisguised prosecution of a trade which they had publicly and loudly promised to suppress, must possess rare gifts for the promotion of harmony. They ought to be employed in the interest of Tammany Hall. We advise Mr. Morrissey to break his wand like Prospero, close his club house, burn his cards, scatter his chips and return to New York without delay. We believe that he would put a new face here on the Democratic situation—as new a face as he used to put on all his opponents. By acting on our advice he will accomplish three desirable things: First, he will give to Tammany Hall the strength which can only come from union; secondly, he will put a stop to a disgraceful violation of the law at Saratoga; and thirdly, he will prevent the shame of the restoration of Tweed to political power, and the consequences to the Democratic party of such a restoration.

Dr. Jordan and the Democratic journals which publish his articles, evidently believe that a lie well stuck to is better than the truth. From a Democratic stand point it may be. He has the "cheek" to put his assertion against the official records relative to the sale of the Agricultural College scrip and several of the Democratic papers publish it just as if it contained a particle of truth. For this campaign that gun is spiked. It may be used next season.—[Portland Press

DELEGATES ELECTED. The following delegates were elected at Oldtown to attend the County Convention and five of the number chosen to attend the District Convention. James Weymouth, Geo. F. Dillingham, D. G. Sawyer, F. W. Folsom, O. E. Hinckley, J. N. Richardson, Davis Norton. When the resolve was passed instructing the delegates to support W. H. Chesley for Senator, two of the delegates rose and declared their intention to support Alexander Webb, Esq., of Lowell.

At the Republican caucus in Milo Monday evening W. I. Wood and W. P. Young, understood to be favorable to Gen. Plaisted, were chosen delegates to the District Convention.

The Lewiston Journal says "The charge has been brought against the Sons of Temperance, recently in session at Providence that they showed symptoms of colorphobia by refusing to organize a grand division for negroes. It now appears that what they did was a very just and sensible thing—they refused to organize a separate colored grand division in a State where a grand division already existed to which black men and black women were equally eligible."

POLITICAL AND PERSONAL.

If the Boston Herald were an organ it would support Rice it says. But being substantially an organ on the other side, it supports Gaston.—Lowell Courier.

An Ohio paper has discovered that Pendleton is the Ensign Stebbins of resumption—in favor of the principle but "agin it enforcement."

They say that Senator Eaton, of Connecticut feels bad because the Democratic Legislature of that State did not indorse his great speech. It was shameful—let's see, what was that great speech about?

The Cincinnati Gazette says that Gov. Allen is losing ground every day. His own speeches are telling against him with great effect. Such addresses as he made at Newark and Gallipolis are driving Democrats from him all over the State.

We take it that if there is anything that outside politicians need not disturb their souls about, it is the next Senatorial election in Maine. Whenever knew the Republicans there to fail to take care of their own affairs with "neatness and despatch" at the expressman says.—Boston Journal.

Lamar, of Mississippi, whom some men seem to regard as a coming light, recently made a three hours' speech, in which we are told, "he placed the responsibility of the 'color line' with the Republican party, whose policy had been the source of all the troubles in the South." This is just what Toombs always does, although his style is not quite so rhetorical as Lamar's.

An Iowa correspondent of the New York Times, giving a careful review of the political situation in that State, concludes as follows:

"The Republican vote of last year will probably be increased by the return to the party of perhaps a majority of those who left it, for the anti-monopoly movement, and of pretty much all the Liberals who had not heretofore come back except the Germans in the river counties, and also by a plurality of the new vote, altogether making its prospective majority at least 35,000 and possibly 40,000, carrying with it three-fourths of the General Assembly."

SOME TIME.

Sometime when all life's lessons have been learned,
And sun and stars forevermore have set,
The things which our weak judgment here have spurned,
The things o'er which we grieved with lashes wet,
Will flash before us, out of life's dark night,
As stars shine most in deeper tints of blue;
And we shall see how all God's plans were right,
And how what seemed, reproof was love most true.

And we shall see how while we frown and sigh,
God's plans go on as best for you and me;
How when we called, he heeded not our cry,
Because his wisdom to the end could see.
And e'en as prudent parents disallow
Too much of sweet to craving babyhood,
So God, perhaps, is keeping from us now
Life's sweetest things, because it seemeth good.

And if sometime commingled with life's wine
We find some wormwood, and rebel and shrink,
Be sure a wiser hand than yours or mine
Pours out this potion for our lips to drink.
And if some friend we love is lying low,
Where human kisses cannot leave his face,
Oh, do not blame the loving Father so,
But wear your sorrow with obedient grace.

And you shall shortly know that lengthened breath
Is not the sweetest gift God sends his friend,
And that, sometimes, the sable pall of death
Conceals the fairest boon his love can send.
If we could push ajar the gates of life,
And stand within and all God's workings see,
We could interpret all this doubt and strife,
And for each mystery could find a key!

But not to-day. Then be content, poor heart!
God's plans, like lilies pure and white, unfold;
We must not tear the close-shut leaves apart—
Time will reveal the calyxes of gold.
And if, through patient toil, we reach the land
Where tired feet, with sandals loose, may rest,
When we shall clearly know and understand,
I think that we shall say, "God knew the best."

MORLEY FELL.

CHAPTER I.

Continued.

It was a few days after this toward the close of a brilliant August that Harry one evening sauntered across his uncle's grounds and the [illegible] with quicker steps began a walk of one mile towards a small copse at the foot of Morley Fell which towered up abruptly to the skies on the side nearest to the wood, although still quite passable by a strong and active man whilst on the [illegible] easier slope [illegible] that side the [illegible] generally preferred by all who wished to gain the top, whence a varied and extensive view might be gained, and to those who knew England both Cumberland and Westmoreland certainly carry off the palm for such views of wild and glorious scenery as can be obtained from Morley Fell. Both the copse and a few surrounding acres, together with the steeper side of the fell, belonged to old Mr Vernon, and now his hopeful nephew was about to test a new [illegible] barreled breech-loader—one of the many instances of his uncle's kind [illegible] interest—upon the rabbits [illegible] at all their own way at Morley Fell [illegible] time immemorial. Naturally, [illegible] expecting good sport he was [illegible] and surprised after skirting two sides of the wood and after vainly peering about for some ten minutes or a [illegible] an hour to find that despite [illegible] of the little fellows not a [illegible] was to be seen. Somebody must be [illegible] was his muttered exclamation, as he plunged into the wood, and coming out after a five minutes scramble, on the other side facing the fell since though there [illegible] apparently tying up a ferret or two in a bag whilst a powerful lurcher was regarding with interest some half-dozen rabbits lying at his master's feet. There were not more than one hundred yards between them, and no sooner had Vernon [illegible] twenty paces than the dog sprang to his feet with a deep growl, not less speedily did the man seize his string [illegible] in one hand and a stout cudgel in the other and spring over a low stone wall close at hand, followed by the lurcher when he turned round to see the extent of his danger. Apparently satisfied that it was not much as he saw but one man after him and that not a keeper he threw down his rabbits again, and calling his dog close to his heels awaited Harry who, excited to greater wrath at seeing the fellow flee, a fact which at once stamped him as a trespasser had put on regular [illegible] to come up with him, and now arriving at the wall somewhat puffed and in anything but good humor.

"Hollo, you fellow, what are you doing here, giving me all this bother? What do you mean by it? Do you know you're trespassing?" he jerked out.

The fellow—a powerful built and rather [illegible] looking vagabond, evidently puzzled what to answer, grasped his stick all the tighter and then growled out "I want to meet up at you!"

"Confound you! I never said you were. What's that got to do with it? You're trespassing, you know you are. I'll see about this whole [illegible] your name?"

"My name be d—n-d!" shouted the fellow. "What's your'n? What reet have yer [illegible] about more to me? I se gotten these ere rabbits, and I means to keep em," he added, as he once more laid hold of them and seemed about to depart.

"Drop them!" roared Harry, as he mounted the wall. "If you take a single rabbit——"

"If yer touch me rabbits Sandy shall throttle yer!" roared back the villain with equal energy. "Here at em, seize em my [illegible]" he cried again to Harry spring [illegible] from the wall. There were only a dozen [illegible] between them now when the savage beast, without any warning, sprang with [illegible] fury at [illegible] from its master's side [illegible] it was all over in a moment. A puff of smoke a sharp crack, and there [illegible] stood a remarkable picture. On one side was Harry, his piece presented full at the man's head, on the other was the poacher literally rooted to the spot with fear anger and amazement combined. Between them lay the ferocious Sandy breathing out his last gasp, shot right through the heart. How like Vernon it was! His boldness and decision did not desert him at a pinch like this and I believe really saved his life, Harry said afterward. "Pluck. Oh it wasn't pluck. I did it without thinking of it." But it is just that pluck in my estimation which shows itself in when or where as occasion requires [illegible] which is not wanting in the heart of [illegible] which I really call pluck.

"Ay—thou shalt pay for this!" at length cried his opponent advancing a [illegible] and swinging his club.

"Another step and you are a dead man," now and in hoarse but earnest tones from Vernon's mouth. "You would kill me if you could," he added "and I shall shoot you just as I've shot your dog in self defence if you don't take yourself off immediately."

Completely cowed not only by the words and determined voice but more perhaps, by the whole attitude and unflinching eye, which threatened him with instant death, the fellow immediately backed a few paces, and then going off until out of range, he only [illegible] to shout out some bitter oaths before disappearing altogether in the distance.

Harry turned to examine the dog for a minute. "Tremendous still in death," and the sight of the little chance at close quarters he would have had in a struggle with such a beast, especially when a strong ruffian was by with a stake to give him no [illegible] tap on the skull. He then skirted the wood toward home and getting one shot at a rabbit of course missing it for his nerves were a bit shaky now that all was over. On the whole however, by the time he got to his room he felt rather merry at the thought of what the good people would say about his adventure at the dinner-table, and it did after he did tell his tale, and laughed heartily over it, but even his uncle scarce saw much to laugh at, whilst one of the ladies—Harry was rather pleased than otherwise to observe—turned very pale indeed. That very evening also Mr Vernon dispatched a keeper to the place, to see if he could identify the dog; but although the man searched diligently, neither dog nor rabbits were to be found only a deep crimson patch upon the grass where the scene had evidently occurred.

Three weeks passed away and with them all recollection of the affair, and Harry, shouldering his gun, once more found himself towards the close of a September day, on the out skirts of the wood, determined if possible, to give the rabbits a warm farewell before he returned to town. There were several rabbits out on the feed, and as he sauntered along, getting now and then a really good flying shot at the little beggars as they scuttled towards the sheltering furze, he thought he had never enjoyed anything more, never seen a more glorious sunset, and reflected with regret that this would be the last of his pleasant solitary strolls which he so much delighted in, and which it would be impossible to get elsewhere. Having at last exhausted his stock of cartridges—not anticipating much sport, he had not burdened himself with many—and having strung up his rabbits by ones and twos to convenient trees, intending to send a boy for them in the morning, he paused on the other side of the wood, and gazing sadly upon Morley Fell, he thus soliloquised "Once more, and now for the last time, do I behold thee. Sadder me but to climb thy [illegible] and [illegible] thee scenes I love so well. Would I were thee, old Fell, to keep a watchful eye upon my darling Maud!" Arousing himself from these and such-like thoughts, and refreshed by the idea of a little muscular exertion, he began to climb, but had not ascended twenty feet, before, with a start and a sensation of nervous apprehension, he glanced rapidly upwards and then around, but nothing seemed to stir but his heart, which beat violently. "Bah! what a coward I am, I must have been thinking of that affair here before."

But no, his instinct, as is often the case, was right, and he was wrong. He does not see the danger just at that moment, concealed as it is by the old stone wall, but none the less real danger is menacing him, and now will he have need of all his pluck, of all his cool decision. Had he perceived and understood the peril which was creeping fast upon him, he would not have stopped to examine that fern peeping from out a niche in the rock nor plucked the prettiest frond for some one he was soon to leave. Look how he loiters! will he see his imminent danger in time to avoid it? No, heedless, and with thoughts fixed far away, and mind intent upon the future, he saw not, heard not.

CHAPTER II.

Scarce had he set his foot upon the fell, than, issuing like shadows from the wood he had so lately left, there came forth two men, speedily joined by a third.

"Well, Bill," muttered one of the two to the last comer, "this is a rum go, our game's gone to earth somewhere."

"Ay, curse him! the bird's flown," responded Bill who was none other than our former acquaintance, the master of the deceased Sandy. "I could thee we ould be o'er late, but I'll be even wi' em yet."

"Hist!" whispered the third man, clutching Bill by the sleeve, and pointing towards the fell.

"By——! there he goes!" uttered Bill in great excitement. "Now, my lads, let's all slip awa to th' ould wall. We maun keep together; he's a devil to deal wi'."

Without more ado, they soon gained the wall, and had Harry gazed more earnestly on looking round, he would have seen them half-concealed, just about to slip over it. On they went, they reached the fell, step by step, each choosing his own path, up the side they crawl, carefully picking their way, and pausing to rest only behind the larger boulders of rock here and there jutting out. They are desperate men, bent upon a desperate task. Revenge pure and simple actuate one man—he is Billy. He had easily induced his companions—his companions in more than one outrage which might have sent them all swinging—to join him in his plan, a plan which promised them some fun and which, at any rate, promised one of the three the possession of a good breech loader. And now they are but a short way below him. O warning instinct warn him once again! But instinct now is quiet. Ah, nothing now can save him! On they stealthily creep, those lawless men. Harry is climbing unconsciously but pretty vigorously now, but the men are gaining fast upon him. Already they are pausing for a supreme effort, before they make their rush when, in the providence of God, Harry, in scrambling along, loosens a large stone, he nearly slips, but recovering himself turns to see how soon it would reach the bottom. An instant more, and he had been too late. With a startled shout, or alarm, he sees two men only a couple of yards below him, and had he not by some half dozen springs, light and rapid as the chamois, leaped into comparative safety, they would have had him in their grasp. In that one glance he had seen enough, and more than enough, to convince him of his dangerous position. In the upturned face and vindictive eyes of the man just below him, he recognized clearly enough the villainous features of his old antagonist, and now, as he rested for an instant to get his wind he saw not only one but three men straining every nerve to come up with him, and heard their eager shouts as they followed in pursuit.

Suddenly his foremost pursuer halts, apparently almost beaten. Now is Harry's chance once more to collect himself. He immediately sits down, facing the men below him and pulls out his flask—empty—every precious drop gone! Billy eyes him without speaking, but with the ferocity of a wild beast. Harry wisely does not waste his breath in talking. Billy is the first to move, followed by his companions, he does not plunge away now as he did at the beginning of the chase, but quietly and yet with speed works his way up. Harry too sets himself deliberately to work: he knows that his only chance now is to gain the top at least a minute before the men come up, for he has already had experience of the way in which hill-men can in an incredibly short time make their way to the bottom again. A very awkward and abrupt piece of climbing comes now, which Harry at any other time would have gladly shirked, but the difficulty is past, and when he turns with a degree of assurance he has not felt before to see if it will in any way damp or hinder his pursuers ardor, while he gains once more his breath. His breath is nearly all knocked out of him again though by seeing his pursuers strike off to the left, and climb with redoubled vigor and seeming ease a path circling round the projecting rock, and which he wonders he missed seeing. It was evident the men knew their ground and poor Harry shuddered to think of the consequences if, by unforeseen difficulties, he is at length brought to bay. The weary chase once more proceeds. Harry rather sickens at the thought of being hunted in this way, and I am proud to believe his statement that in that awful hour he thought of and wished for one. He could hardly credit his senses—Londoner as he was—that all this was taking place in England. Once more he halts, and plantes himself firmly on the ledge formed by a sheep-run he awaits the human hounds, running steadily on the trail. For the first time he challenges Billy as he draws near, and aiming his gun, cries "Stop! if you come on one of you must die."

Billy's comrades pull up but only for an instant. "Gun ain't loaded," he spluttered out, knowing that Harry would have used the same persuasion long since at the piece had been really charged. Harry seized the gun by the muzzle and whirling it over his head threatens a smashed brain-pan to the first who comes within reach, his higher ground, too, makes him look formidable. But the undaunted Billy signing to the two ruffians beside him to climb up right, and left creeps a little closer, but quite out of Harry's reach. This was too much for Harry; that three should make a simultaneous attack upon him on all sides, in such a place must be fatal to him he knew should he manage to dispose of even one or two of his antagonists. He turned and fled. Once more he struggles gamely on, he hears the summit—the top is gained; no, the fell rises up still higher. His throat is parched, his legs feel not his own; climbing, and such a climb as this, they have not been accustomed to. Faint and in despair, he almost gives up, the thought of Maud, however, comes to help him, while there's life there's hope; he springs to his feet, and now the real summit is close by. With hands bleeding, clothes torn, blinded by his terrible exertions, and scarce hearing, with a terrible singing in his ears, another treble struggle lands him on the top. At full length he lies for a few seconds, while the cold breeze invigorates his exhausted energies, and then, with a murmur of thanks to God, he hastily crosses the ridge, about thirty yards broad. As he sees the huge stones and fragments of rock scattered here and there, he has thoughts of trying the effect of hurling them upon the wretches below, but again thinking that they must be close upon him now, and feeling quite unequal to the desperate task of setting three men in as many minutes, he dashes to the other side, and steadying himself by sliding on his heels, he begins to slide at a good pace down the slope, made slippery by the short and stunted grass. No sooner had he got well under way than his pursuers reach the top on the other side, and despite their anxiety to commence the descent, where, from longer practice in sliding, they hope at length to attain their object, like Harry, they are compelled for a minute to stop before they resume the chase. On glancing below Billy chances to see poor Harry is d[illegible] He had been sliding along fairly well, when the ground suddenly became rougher, and loose stones there [illegible] he was compelled, therefore, to assume an upright position, and scramble down as best he could: but, as every one knows who has tried it, it is easier to start than to stop when once one has set off. Harry was delighted at the rapidity of his new motion, as compared with the slower rate of sliding; he had good legs, and kept his feet where many would have lost them, but faster and faster he went; his strides down the fell-side were almost lightning in their bad they not been so dangerous. In vain he tried to moderate his pace; he went like the wind; he felt in another moment he would be dashed to atoms; his only chance was to throw himself backwards. This he barely accomplished, for he was almost powerless, but his heel catching in a small tuft of gorse at the same moment, he spun around like a top, and after turning a few somersaults, he only came to an anchor by laying hold of another tuft. He felt himself terribly bruised and out of breath; and perceiving a warm something gushing down his cheek and neck, he found by putting up his hand that the hard rock had inflicted a fearful wound upon his scalp; he had a large gash, too upon his forehead. Billy, from above, scarcely observed all this before, with the swoop of an eagle, he rushed upon his prey; the other two men evidently feared a like catastrophe with that of Vernon if they showed too much haste, and they felt that the matter was secure in Billy's hands. On looking up Harry saw that he must arouse himself, or all would soon be over.

AMERICAN AND FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY.

Solicitor of Patents.

For Inventions, Trade Marks and Designs,

No 76 State St, opposite Kilby St, Boston

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure Patents in the United States, also in Great Britain, France, and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents executed on reasonable terms, with despatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded at Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity of a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Com'r of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.

EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"Mr. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend all inventors to apply to him to procure their patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases, and at very reasonable charges.

JOHN TAGGART."

Boston, Jan. 1, 1875. 1 yr. Saw

To the Honorable Judge of Probate for the County of Penobscot:

The undersigned, Administrator of the estate of Levi Lancaster, Jr., late of Maxfield, in said county, deceased, respectfully represents that the goods and chattels, rights and credits of said deceased are not sufficient to pay his just debts and charges of administration by the sum of two hundred and ninety nine dollars.

Wherefore your petitioner prays your Honor to grant him a license to sell, at public or private sale, and convey all of the real estate of which said Levi Lancaster, Jr., died seized and possessed, the same being situated in the said town of Maxfield, or by a partial sale of any equal portion thereof, the residue would be greatly depreciated in value, to satisfy said debts, expenses of sale, and charges of administration.

Foreclosure Notice.

BANGOR SAVINGS BANK, of Bangor, gives notice that EBEN BLUNT and EBEN W BLUNT, of said Bangor, by their deed dated the sixteenth day of March, A. D. 1874, and recorded in Penobscot Registry of Deeds Book 449, page 348, conveyed in mortgage to said Bank certain lots or parcels of land situate in the northeast corner of the town of Hampden in said County of Penobscot, upon the Penobscot river, together with all the mills and other buildings, wharves, piers and other structures upon the same, with all the boilers, engines, machinery and fixtures in said mills appertaining thereto, embracing the steam mills and lands on which they stand and lands adjoining and in the neighborhood thereof, formerly known as the "Mitchell Steam Mills," the premises, so far as the lands are included, being the same as described in the following deeds, viz: Richard G. Hinman's deed to said mortgagors dated March 9, 1872, and recorded as aforesaid, Vol. 419, page 18; also said Hinman's deed to said Eben W., of same date, and recorded in same Vol., page 19; And from said Eben W. to said Eben, dated March 9, 1872, and recorded Vol. 420, page 83, George W. Savage's to said Blunts et al, dated March 1, 1873, and recorded Vol. 423, page 470, and John P. Webber's to said Eben, dated March 4, 1874, to all which deeds reference is hereby made.

Said Bank having released so much of said mortgaged premises as lies between the old and new county road, being same conveyed by said Blunts to Thos. Cary. And the conditions of said mortgage being broken, said Bank, by reason of such breach, claims a foreclosure as to the whole of said mortgaged premises except the parcel so released.

Dated at Bangor, this seventeenth day of July, A. D. 1875.

LETTER CARRIERS.

All letters are delivered free by carriers when addressed to street and number. People should inform their correspondents of above and have their letters addressed accordingly.

Persons leaving their address at the General Delivery can also have their letters sent, but it is much more convenient to have the street and number on, and they will be delivered earlier than if the same is put on at the office. Carriers make two deliveries daily, the first trip supplying the extremes of their routes.

Collections are made morning and evening in season for important mails—the down town boxes fifteen and the up town boxes thirty minutes before closing mails at the office.

Holidays and Sundays the Carrier's Window will be open for the delivery of letters from 8½ to 9½ A. M. Also open evenings from 7½ to 8½ P. M.

Any irregularities in the Carriers' department should be reported to the office.

ENVELOPES.

No additional charge will be made for printing the name and request to return, across the left hand upper corner of the envelopes furnished by the Post Office Department, (samples of which may be seen at the Cashier's window,) when ordered in lots of not less than 500.

A request for the return of a letter to the writer, if unclaimed within thirty days, or less, written or printed, with the writer's name, post office and State, across the left end of the envelope, on the face side, will be complied with.

The public are earnestly recommended to procure Stamped Envelopes with printed return request, as the expense is less, and letters thus endorsed, if not delivered to the person addressed, are returned to the writer free of charge.

First class envelopes of above furnished at $32 50 per thousand.

Stamps cut from Stamped Envelopes cannot be used to prepay postage. The use of such stamps is punishable by a fine of fifty dollars.

Stamped Envelopes, spoiled in directing, are redeemed at this office.

DOMESTIC POSTAGE.

All Letters must be Prepaid—Letters for the Mails in the United States, three cents the half ounce or single rate. City letters, two cents half ounce or single rate.

NEWSPAPERS

After January 1st, 1875, all regular newspapers must be prepaid at the office of publication, at the rate of two cents per pound for each issue on weekly papers or those published oftener than once a week; less frequently than once a week, three cents. The same law applies to dealers.

County papers free, except to letter carrier offices, and papers coming to this office, if published in County, are subject to postage. Daily papers published in County, if delivered by carrier, one cent each, to be prepaid by stamps.

Postage to Canada—Same as in the States on letters and papers. Pre-payment compulsory, merchandise limited to 8 oz., postage 10 cents.

TRANSIENT PRINTED MATTER AND BOOKS AND MERCHANDISE.

One cent an ounce, or fraction, weight limited to four pounds. Liquids, and anything that will injure mail excluded. All matter of this class must be wrapped, so as to be examined, without destroying wrappers.

ADVERTISED LETTERS

All letters remaining in the office are advertised on Monday of each week. If not claimed in one month thereafter, they are then forwarded to Washington.

MONEY ORDERS.

Especial attention is called to the Money Order system, as a safe and cheap method of transmitting small sums through the mails. Orders are issued in sums of not more than fifty dollars. Larger amounts can be transmitted to the same person, at the same time, by additional orders.

RATES.

On orders not exceeding $15, 10 cents
" over $15 and not exceeding $30, 15 cents
" over $30 and not exceeding $40, 20 cents
" over $40 and not exceeding $50, 25 cents

Money Orders can also be obtained on England, Ireland, Scotland, Wales, Switzerland and German States.

Never put Money in a Letter—Always Procure a Money Order.

If money is to be remitted, a Postal Money Order should be obtained. If upon points where there is no Money Order Office, then the letter should be Registered. Money should never be enclosed in an ordinary letter.

Office Hours—From 8 A. M. to 6 P. M.

REGISTRY DEPARTMENT.

All valuable letters should be Registered, unless a Money Order is obtained. Under the present system of Registration, letters are transmitted with perfect safety.

Letters may be Registered by paying postage in full, and a Registration fee in stamps, for—

United States,	10 cents
Great Britain and Ireland,	10 cents
Canada, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia,	10 cents
Germany, and German Austrian Postal Union, embracing the German and Austrian States,	10 cents
